Personal Profile:

Shreya Mago, Psychologist & Special Educator working with children with Autism Spectrum Disorder. She holding great importance in empowering the parents' community. Their happiness quotient and managing mechanism are of utmost importance to her. The nurturance a child feels during the sessions has to be sustained at home. For this, Shreya rigorously trains the mothers and family members. This has given maximum results to all her efforts. While using techniques and principles of ABA, play therapy, TEACCH, and behavior management, she emotionally strengthens the caregivers. In due course of time, her methods are adopted as an addition in their way of life and everyone begins to witness the desired results.

Shreya has studied psychology from Delhi University and completed a Masters in Clinical Psychology. She has a Diploma in Special Education (Autism Spectrum Disorder) and is a licensed professional from the Rehabilitation Council of India, Government of India. Her good work has often been covered by publications like the Hindustan Times, Deccan Herald, the Times of India, Press Trust of India and the Pioneer. In 2012, she had presented a poster on the Effectiveness of Neurofeedback Therapy for the treatment of children with ADHD at the Asian Congress on ADHD held in South Korea. Shreya holds certifications in Rapid Prompting Method, Music Therapy, Play Therapy, Attended Communication Methodologies (AACs, PECs) and Behaviour Management. Shreya works with children from 2 to 8 years of age, and has always been at the forefront organizing the CCAW's signature event titled, the Autism Carnival and the Autism Conclave, since the year 2013.
