Personal Profile:

I am a psychology professional and researcher with a strong focus on Social Emotional Learning (SEL), counselling, inclusive education, and neurodevelopmental interventions. My work combines academic research with practical application, particularly in the areas of emotional development, child wellbeing, filial therapy, and evidence-based support systems for children with diverse learning and developmental needs.

I have contributed to research papers, literature reviews, and conference presentations exploring themes such as autism, emotional conversations, parent-led interventions, and inclusive educational practices. Alongside my academic pursuits, I actively design SEL curricula, therapeutic frameworks, and reflective learning experiences for schools, educators, parents, and adolescents.
